The community is invited to enjoy a beautiful blend of jazz and inspirational music on Friday, Oct. 22, from 9 to 11 a.m. ET at Sacred Heart Hospital on the Gulf as the hospital launches its fall concert series. The concert series is part of the hospital's Arts in Medicine (AIM) program, which integrates performing, meditative and visual arts into a wide variety of settings to promote community wellness.

"Our community, patients and visitors are invited to enjoy soothing music that will calm your nerves and lift your spirit," said Paulina Pendarvis, co-coordinator of the AIM program at Sacred Heart. "It is very exciting to see this program come to fruition – first with the community yoga classes and now with the concert series. We are literally going to flood the halls with high notes!"

The AIM program is composed of four primary areas, including community involvement, caring for the caregiver, arts at the bedside, and displayed art.
